

Worried about memory loss?

A CLINICAL RESEARCH STUDY
MAY BE YOUR NEXT STEP

A clinical research study for people with mild-to-moderate Alzheimer's disease is now enrolling participants.

In this Phase III study, an investigational medication, RVT-101, is being explored as an add-on therapy to donepezil (sometimes known as Aricept®). It is believed that the combination of RVT-101 and donepezil may help with cognition and the ability to perform daily living activities better than donepezil alone.

All study-related exams, tests, study-provided donepezil, and study medication (RVT-101 or placebo) are provided at no cost to study participants. Compensation for study-related time and travel may also be provided.

To be considered for the study, participants must be:

- Experiencing memory loss or diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease or dementia*
- Age 50 - 85
- Taking donepezil
- Accompanied by a caregiver or loved one

Additional eligibility criteria apply.
